הצעה לחיבור – נכתב על ידי מורה לאנגלית בתיכון:

Many people believe that they can rely on first impressions; they think it is enough to see and hear a person for one instant in order to form an opinion about him. I disagree with this belief.

In my opinion, you can never really know a person only from meeting him for the first time. Many people are shy and do not express themselves well in first meetings. They may be nervous or anxious about the meeting, they may not talk enough or talk too much and as a result you may form an incorrect first impression about them.

Moreover, some people may behave too nicely in order to form a good first impression. They may not act as the real them but as a fraud in order to seduce you into thinking what they want you to think about them. These first impressions may mislead you while judging those people.

To sum up, I believe that you cannot trust first impressions as you should know a person deeply before you can judge him. (174 words)
